

FRED LEE STENSON retired in 2008 and again in 2012 but got bored and needed a project. He has a Sailing Master's license and takes groups sailing around the world, in addition to working as a home builder. He is most proud of having the ability to mentor several young people in the construction industry. "Most BHS memories are great—it was a great place to be a high school student." He went by Fred in high school but dropped his first name around 1980 when he opened his company. There was another contractor with a similar name (Fred Swenson) that had a bad reputation, so he started using his middle name (Lee). He lives in the Seattle area.
